HALF A MILLION LOSS

Big Fire This Morning in Atlanta, Georgia.

Claude O'Brien, the Other Murderer of Mr. A. B. Chinn, to Hang.

JURY OUT A SHORT TIME

BIG FIRE IN ATLANTA

Atlanta, Dec. 9.—There was a loss of a half a million dollars, caused this morning by a fire in the very heart of the business section of Atlanta, at the corner of Peachtree and Marietta streets. The flames originated in Snook and Austin's Furniture company's store, on Viaduct, quickly spreading to Norcross building, a six story structure, corner of Marietta street. In a short time the Norcross building, Snook and Austin building, Guarantee Clothing company and Viaduct lunch rooms were completely gutted. The Kimball house, situated in Block East, was saved only by the exertion of supreme efforts on the part of the fire department.

PROMINENT MEN UNHAPPY.

New York, Dec. 9.—Two recent cases of marital infidelity, which will be of interest, have come to light. The unfortunate involved are Elbert Hubbard "Fra Eibertus," editor of "Philistine" and David Bispham, the famous grand opera and concert barytone.

THE OTHER TO DIE.

Lexington, Dec. 9.—The trial of Claude O'Brien for the murder of Merchant A. B. Chinn, was completed here this morning. The jury after hearing the arguments retired, and in 20 minutes returned a verdict of guilty and fixed O'Brien's penalty at death. The boy murderer sat unmoved during the reading of the verdict.

MARRY IN LOUISVILLE.

MR. LAWRENCE RASOR AND MISS NORA JOHNSON LEAVE TONIGHT.

Mr. Lawrence P. Rasor, the night clerk at the Palmer house, and Miss Nora Estelle Johnson, the daughter of Officer W. M. Johnson, of Fourth and Washington streets, will leave tonight at 1:20 o'clock for Louisville and tomorrow at 3:30 will be married in that city. The ceremony will be performed at the residence of friends and the couple after spending a few days in Louisville will go to Cincinnati and other places on a short bridal tour.

Mr. Rasor is the son of Mr. L. P. Rasor, one of Paducah's best known citizens and is a popular young man with his employers and many friends. His prospective bride is one of Paducah's most attractive and popular young ladies and has a host of admirers.

After their bridal tour Mr. and Mrs. Rasor will reside with the parents of the groom on North Fourth street.

HIS FATHER EXPECTED.

Curry, the farmer who is now in the county jail awaiting trial for larceny, is getting no better. His father is a prosperous farmer of near Kuttawa and has friends here who have notified him of his son's condition. He will probably come here or will send some one to look after Curry. Judge Husbands has been so busy with criminal cases that he can not find time to hear Curry's case.

ALMOST A TRAGEDY

Young Men Fight on Their Way Home From a Dance.

Two Shot and One Cut—Arrests Made But None Seriously Injured.

CASE SET FOR FRIDAY

A misunderstanding assisted by ill feeling from a previous difficulty, came near resulting in a tragedy shortly after midnight this morning near Fifth and Jones streets. There are as usual two versions to the affair, but the facts that most interest the police are that O. L. Miller, a grocer of South Second street was slightly cut under the ear, and Sam and Will Herbst, of Tennessee streets near Eleventh, were each shot through the right arm.

It seems that Miller had been attending dances with a young lady, who was joked by Will Herbst, not in an offensive way, but enough to anger Miller, who on one occasion knocked Herbst down twice.

Last night Miller attended the dance at Barksdale hall at Fifth and Jones with the same young lady, and the two Herbst boys were there. There was no trouble during the evening, but as they were on their way home, Miller, so it is claimed, was informed by the young lady with him that the Herbst boys were following him, and coming on him with a knife. He turned and in a few moments he had drawn a 32-calibre pistol and fired several shots, shooting each of the Herbst boys through an arm. There is a variance here as to what happened just previous to the shooting. The Herbst boys claim that they were on their way home, and happened to be in the rear of the couple, and had no intention of molesting Miller. They claim that suddenly he turned on them and began shooting and that after he had fired three times they got out what weapons they had, knives, and in defending themselves chased him back into the building, where they were kept at bay by Fairfax Craig at the head of the steps with a chair.

Miller's overcoat was slashed in several places, but he was only slightly cut under an ear. His pistol refused to fire more than three times, or there might have been a fatal shooting.

The young men's wounds were dressed by Dr. A. Hessig, of Tennessee street, and Miller gave himself up at the city hall after he had taken the young lady home and was warranted for malicious shooting and wounding and today gave bond.

One of the Herbst boys is disabled today, but neither is badly injured. They will be warranted for malicious cutting, and Judge Sanders has set all three of the cases for trial Friday morning.

FIVE KILLED

RELATED BLAST NEAR NASHVILLE SCATTERS WORKMEN.

Nashville, Tenn., Dec. 9.—Workmen tunneling for the Louisville and Nashville railroad at Baker's Hill, about twelve miles from here, arranged a blast in a cut and set it off, but for some reason it did not explode. The men, all Italians and nineteen in number, went back to the cut and started to work clearing away things for another blast. Suddenly the first blast exploded, killing five men, seriously wounding three and injuring the other eleven more or less severely.

THEIR ULTIMATUMS

GERMANY AND ENGLAND AFTER VENEZUELA.

London, Dec. 9.—Great Britain and Germany have presented ultimatums to Venezuela, which will be followed up by the seizure of the customs unless a satisfactory settlement is forthcoming within a brief period. The ultimatums have a time limit, but the exact date cannot be ascertained.

Engineer L. A. Washington went to Smithland this morning to appear for the I. C. railroad in a damage suit in the Livingston county circuit court.

The Sun's Fund For A Christmas Tree.

The Sun is receiving donations every day for the Christmas tree fund and is assured of its success. The number of poor to be taken care of this year is very large however, and the task of giving each deserving one something will be a big one.

While the responses to our appeals for assistance have been generous still there are a good number of people who should contribute to the fund and have not. It is only by working together that much good can be done in work of this nature and The Sun again asks that every man, woman and child in Paducah help us in this laudable work. We are not doing it for glory but simply desire that those poor people in the city for whom the prospects of a Christmas of any sort are but little, shall, for once, taste of the pleasures of this great feast day.

Send us in something. We don't care what it is, every little helps. There is none among The Sun's readers who could not spare a 25 cent piece and if all should do this we would have a fund sufficient indeed. So now, fill out the coupon below and send it in. It will help in a noble work.

To The Sun

I inclose herewith

for the Christmas tree to be given the poor of the city the day following Christmas.

WILL NOT CLOSE

Understood That the Saloon Men Will Make a Fight.

As Soon As Ordinance Goes Into Effect They Will Act.

It is said on apparently good authority that the saloon keepers are going to fight the closing ordinance which was given final passage at the last meeting of the board of aldermen. The ordinance has to be signed by the presiding officer of the two boards and the mayor, and the mayor has twenty days in which to sign.

It is understood that if the mayor does not sign it until the 20 days have expired, a new ordinance will be introduced placing the hours for closing at about 11:30 o'clock, which will be satisfactory to a majority of the saloon keepers.

At present, however, the intention is to make a fight against closing as soon as the ordinance goes into effect. The saloons will not close, or some of them will not, and there will be a test case to determine the constitutionality of the new law.

IN POLICE COURT.

A VERY SMALL DOCKET THIS MORNING.

Judge Sanders had a brief police court this morning.

The cases were only a few misdemeanors, with the case against O. L. Miller mentioned elsewhere as shooting the Herbst boys, continued until Friday.

Jennie Wilson was fined $3 and costs for a breach of the peace, and Mack McDonald was fined $1 and costs for a plain drunk.

Messrs. Rid Reed and F. G. La Rue of Smithland were in the city today.

NEW RAILROAD

Articles of Incorporation Have Been Filed.

It Will Touch Near Hickman, Ky., on the Mississippi.

Articles of incorporation have been issued to the Charleston and Mississippi River Railroad company. This company is chartered to build a standard gauge railroad from a point in Scott county, Missouri, to a point on the Mississippi river opposite Hickman, Ky., the point being within Mississippi county in Missouri, and to pass through or near Charleston. The length of the road is to be about fifty miles, twenty-four of which will be in Scott county and twenty-six in Mississippi county. The company is capitalized at $500,000 of which $1,000 for each mile of the proposed road has been subscribed and 5 per cent of this sum paid. The incorporators, with the shares of stock each one holds, are: Paul B. Moore, 4,000; Edward G. Rolwing, Joe Hart, Mrs. Charles J. Moore, all of Charleston, 250 shares each; Mrs. F. A. Brooks of Cape Girardeau, 250 shares.

GREAT INCREASE

SEEMS TO BE NO DOUBT AS TO THE POSTOFFICE'S GETTING IN FIRST CLASS.

The increase in postoffice receipts for the past month are $800 greater than for the same month last year, and together with the steady increase every month this fiscal year, practically insures the Paducah postoffice getting into the first class next year. This means more clerks and more salaries.

COLD AGAIN LAST NIGHT.

The temperature last night again went to 22, the same as the night before.

DEAL ABOUT CLOSED FILES IT TOMORROW

It is Said the Combine Will Get the Paducah Ways.

$40,000, Approximately Reported to Be the Price—Officers Say Deal Is Not Quite Consummated.

TRANSFER ABOUT JANUARY 1

The deal for the Paducah marine ways, mentioned yesterday, has been practically consummated, according to report, but officers of the ways do not consider it clinched. It is thought, according to one of them, that the consummation will take place January 1 and the plant be then turned over to the combine.

Captain Ed Howard went to Cairo and Mound City last night, and had nothing definite to say. It was said today that the price agreed on for the ways is in the neighborhood of $40,000, and the date of transfer will be January 1.

A great deal of interest is taken in the deal, especially in steamboat circles, because it may mean a great deal to them, as well as to Paducah. A prominent river man said today:

"Captain Howard represents a syndicate that with the Paducah marine ways will control every one on the Ohio river. This means that the combine can throw as much or as little work as they desire to the Paducah ways, and further that we men who have boats to repair, instead of the benefits of competition we have had will have to pay the combine's prices or go to marine ways somewhere else."

The report mentioned yesterday that the syndicate would close the ways here in case they secured them, was probably without foundation, although the syndicate has not apprised anyone, so far as could be learned, of its intentions.

If the ways are ever abandoned, or get in such a condition that boats of large size cannot be repaired on them, they revert to the city, real estate, machinery and all, in pursuance of the original grant.

Except in case of a great rush boats to be repaired or rebuilt by the combine would likely be sent for repairs to the nearest ways, and with works at Cincinnati, Jeffersonville, Evansville, Paducah, Mound City and other places, Paducah might get a great deal or a very little if operated by the combine.

CAPT. JOHNSON'S FUNERAL

A LARGE CROWD, AMONG IT MANY OFFICIALS, ATTENDS.

The funeral of the late Captain Joseph H. Johnson took place this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock from the First Christian church, and was attended by a large crowd, while the floral designs were very profuse.

The Knights Templars, Knights of Honor and Workmen were the secret orders represented, and there was a large delegation of city officials and former city officials who attended in a body.

The deceased being a former mayor, the council met this afternoon and passed resolutions of respect before leaving for the funeral.

The pall bearers appointed were: Mayor D. A. Yeiser, Judge D. L. Sanders, Hon. Charles Reed, T. W. Baird, Alderman J. V. Greif and councilman Ed Woolfolk.

K. OF H. ELECTION.

OFFICERS WERE LAST NIGHT CHOSEN

Esther Lodge No 1162, Knights and Ladies of Honor elected the following officers last night: J. M. Fuller, protector; W. O. Sutherland, vice protector; C. W. Morrison, financial secretary; Mrs. Marie Switzer, recording secretary; Miss Maggie Williams, treasurer; Mrs. M. C. McElhaney, chaplain; R. McClean, guide; G. Switzer, inside guardian.

Miss Eliza Puryear returned from Arlington today at noon.

Mr. H. C. Allison returned from Mayfield at noon today.

Marshal Crow Will Start the Ball Rolling and Try to Hold on.

Papers Served on Him This Morning to Turn Over Everything to Chief.

HE WILL FIGHT TO THE END

City Marshal James Crow will tomorrow file his injunction suit to enjoin Chief of Police James Collins from attempting to collect the fines and costs in the police court, and will thus begin the litigation that may involve more than one office before it is over.

This morning the official papers containing the order of the board of fire and police commissioners that everything be turned over to Chief of Police James Collins was served on Marshal Crow after police court. He presided as marshal in the police court this morning as usual, and collected the fines and costs, but it is not known what he will do tomorrow.

Marshal Crow has been contemplating an injunction suit ever since Chief of Police James Collins took charge of the police force by virtue of the new charter and his appointment by the fire and police commissioners. As Chief Collins did not attempt to collect the fines and perquisites, however, Marshal Crow decided to do nothing until later.

Now that the council has notified him that his salary has stopped, and the fire and police commissioners have notified him that Chief of Police James Collins will hereafter collect fines and costs in the police court leaving Marshal Crow with no duties and no compensation, he will wage a vigorous fight and Attorney W. A. Berry will tomorrow file the injunction suit and the war will be on.

It is probable that a temporary injunction will be granted which will prevent Chief Collins from collecting any of the fines or costs until the case is decided.

ARGUMENT BEGINS

All the Evidence in the Hutchison Case Finished.

It Is Believed the Jury Will Get the Case By Tomorrow Night.

The Eli Hutchison murder case will be finished tomorrow and given to the jury.

This morning the evidence was closed and at 11 o'clock Hon. William Reed began speaking. Some little rebuttal evidence was heard and a motion was then entered by the defendant's attorneys to exclude the testimony of the wife, who testified that Gray had said he had done nothing to provoke the shooting. This was spoken by Gray to his wife soon after the shooting and in the presence of Hutchison. The motion also wanted the dying statement of Gray excluded but the court overruled the objections. These two are important evidence in the case. After Judge Husbands had overruled the motion Attorney Reed, for the defense, began speaking. He was still addressing the jury at press time. Following him County Attorney Graves, for the prosecution, will speak and then Attorney Crossland, for the defendant, will take the stand. The speaking will be wound up by Commonwealth Attorney William Bradshaw.

COMPLETE LIBRARY

THE HIGH SCHOOL BOASTS OF A FINE ONE.

A five volume set of Encyclopedia Britannica has been added to the reference library of the High school making it perhaps the most complete library in the city. The library has been a source of pride to the teachers and pupils of the High school for the past several years and now it is as large as any school library in any city of Paducah's size. The pupils frequently donate books to the library and it is always getting larger.

The attendance in the primary grades is better this year than it has been for some time.

The little fellows generally remain at home a great deal during the cold and rainy weather but the records show that this year has been an exception.

HANGED HIMSELF

FARMER NEAR CLINTON AFRAID OF THE LAW.

John Mifflin, a farmer living four or five miles north of Clinton, committed suicide near Spring Hill by hanging himself in the hall of his residence. His wife was at a neighbor's at the time and no one else was about the premises.

He was about 70 years old and was very well to do. His mother died about two weeks ago and he had qualified as her executor. The reason for killing himself is not understood fully but it is said that he imagined he had failed to comply with the law regarding his mother's estate, and being uneducated and standing in dread of the law, he killed himself in a fit of despondency or mental aberration.

The hospital physicians have been very successful this year and the year's record will show fewer deaths and less illness than in many years.

WHILE WE WARN

We Also Comfort and Cheer.

Paine's Celery Compound

Is an Infallible Cure for All Forms of RHEUMATISM.

Although we are all born with the principles of dissolution in our frame which continue to operate from our birth to our death, we are under obligation to Heaven and our loved ones to keep ourselves free from disease and suffering. While death must come to every human being, pain may be avoided, and our days made happy and long, if we keep the blood and physical structure in proper condition.

At this time, while we warn the thousands of rheumatic sufferers of the folly and danger of allowing rheumatism to run unchecked at this season of the year, we can comfort them with the happy assurance that Paine's Celery Compound permanently cures the terrible disease. This wondrous medicine has won the hearty indorsement of medical men, and its virtues are lauded by tens of thousands rescued from agony and death. Mr. Chas. W. Luckner, Mount Pleasant, S. C., who banished his rheumatism by use of Paine's Celery Compound, writes thus:

"It is now going on two months since I have taken Paine's Celery Compound for rheumatism. No other medicine, I think, could ever have done me so much good. I have not had an attack of it since. Previous to taking the Compound, I tried everything, and had two of the best doctors in Charleston, but they only gave me some relief for a few days. Two bottles of Paine's Celery Compound completely cured me."

"HORRORS! WHERE IS THAT MOUSE?"

Written at Random.

"Times ain't the same," declared a Weary Willie as he shuffled into the kitchen of a West End house the other day, and prepared to surround the scraps that were coming his way.

"Ye see, ledly," he explained, "we fellers what has been travelling about the country fer years lookin' fer work, and what had made the business legitimate and in fact had worked it into a profession, we have now been cheated out of our own."

"Yes," he sighed, with a tear trickling down through a ten days' beard, "we ain't no good no more. A lot of these jail birds and professional burglars has usurped our callin, ledly, and instead of being an object of pity and charity, we have become an object of suspicion, if not aversun, and every cop in the cities is always on the lookout fer us. It's all because of them 'Yegmen.' They are thieves and murderers, and they play tramps to avert suspicion, and they have done so much dirt since they went into the biz that we, who's in the legit ain't got no show at all. Many of our best stamping grounds we have had to cut out because they're laying for anything that looks like a tramp, and I reckon it is only a matter of a few brief years until one of the most honored, popular callings to wit our own, is demoralized to a degree of exterminashun. Good day, ledly!"

There was more truth than poetry in the tramp's words. The latest tramp, instead of being a lazy, shiftless vagabond, is a professional thief who uses a tramp's garb as a disguise. They are called 'yegmen' and are the shrewdest criminals out of prison, and have become so skillful and bold within the past year or two that in all cities tramps are being locked up whenever they show themselves, and officers in arresting them on suspicion, often find some badly wanted criminal who has joined the tramp tribe in order that he might better succeed at his calling. It is only a year or two until the old time tramp will have disappeared entirely.

The other day when turkeys were scarce, a well known North Side city official went down to market to buy one. He found that what few were on sale were 15 cents a pound, and another official who is fond of a joke took him aside and confidentially informed him that they were simply trying to rob him, for everybody else had been buying them at eight cents a pound, and they had picked him out as an easy mark. The official became wroth and raved and ranted. He threatened to have every blasted one of them run off the market for daring to want to ask such a price of him—such a prominent official.

Then some of the marketers got mad. They didn't know whether the man was crazy or just naturally mean, so they concluded they would play even. Ever since, when an unusually green man comes to town with spare ribs, backbones, skinny hogs or mashed pumpkin, they send him straight to the official's house. If life isn't made miserable for the official nothing ever was. Saturday a huckster with an emaciated pig he couldn't get rid of at any price on the market was told to go to the official's, as the latter had been making inquiry for just such a looking specimen of pork the day before.

was cautioned by the jokers, "for although he may say he doesn't want anything of the kind he does, and is only trying to 'jew you down.'"

The unsuspecting huckster went around and unloaded the hog onto the official's premises and the official had the hardest time in the world getting him out. He even contemplated going inside after his gun, but the huckster was a stayer and wouldn't leave until, according to reports, he had sold the carcass.

"I went up to Eddyville years ago to attend court," related a well known lawyer this morning "and a new code of practice just having come out, I had been reading up on it. Now as all the older lawyers know, they didn't used to allow us to plead any further than a reply, but under the new code, which made some important changes, there was given considerable more latitude."

"Now for instance when a man filed a suit, or as we call it in law, a petition, there was the answer to come and then the reply."

"This was as far as we could go the old way, but under the new code we could start with the petition, follow with the answer, then the reply, the rejoinder, the sub-rejoinder, the rebutter and sub-rebutter."

"Well, flush with my knowledge of the new code, I went up to this court at Eddyville, and when court convened I arose and said: 'Your honor, I desire to file a rejoinder to such and such a petition.'"

"A what?" he demanded with evident astonishment.

"A rejoinder," I replied.

"But we don't plead any further than reply, you know, he protested."

"Oh yes," I victoriously explained "but you know the code of practice says that you can plead as far as sub-rebutter."

"Well," dryly said the court, "we abolished the code of practice in this court some time ago." Hesitating a moment, he magnanimously added "if it'll do you any good to file it, though, why go ahead."

"That was the last time," concluded the attorney, "that I ever tried to use my new code in those backwoods courts."

Miss May Stockton, who will be remembered as one of the members of the English Stock company at The Kentucky last summer, has been making rapid strides in her profession since she left Paducah, and her friends will be pleased to learn that she is now a favorite on the Pacific Coast, where she is starring in "A Little Outcast," and the papers praise her highly wherever she goes. In fact she has made such a hit that she will no doubt be able to get most anything she wants in the profession next season. Her role this season is that of a newsboy and she has just been the recipient of a very high compliment, the second of its kind that was ever bestowed on a woman.

At Seattle, Wash., one night last week over 100 newsboys occupied a section of the theater, and their enthusiasm knew no bounds. Before the last act their president arose and proposed that Miss Stockton be made an honorary member of the Newsboys' Union, and it went through unanimously with a great shout.

She was called before the curtain, a badge was given her, and she was compelled to make a speech, the first of her stage experience. The company remained there a week and had packed houses every night. Miss Stockton is orary member of a Newsboys' union, the other being Kate Emmet, who was given a similar honor seven years ago. The Seattle papers are full of the young lady's pictures and praises.

"I was up in another city not long ago," said a well known man a day or two ago in the sheriff's office, "when my partner got into a little trouble. I had heard a great deal about city ways, and although I was reasonably certain that wasn't going to buy any gold bricks or give my money to some 'con' man to hold, didn't know exactly what to do. Finally we decided to employ an attorney, however, and found his office in a pretty decent part of a fine building."

"We were ushered in and in a few words explained the case to him, and that we wanted him to help my partner out. Well, he seemed to understand perfectly, but not knowing what the cost was going to be, we asked him what he was going to charge us."

"My fee?" he repeated. "Oh, that depends on whether you furnish the evidence or I furnish it."

"We decided that we had better 'furnish' it ourselves and be on the safe side of trouble, and our fee was accordingly lower. It was the first time that I ever knew, however, that you can buy both legal service and evidence from some of those city lawyers."

Justice Alex Roberts, the "marryin' square" of South Fulton, has just discovered the meanest man in the world, and he is a bridegroom. Sunday a couple called on the justice, who furnished the license, tied the knot, and his bill amounted to $5.50. The groom gave him a $10 bill, and the squire, who seems to have been "rattled," gave him back $3.50, thus receiving but 50 cents for the whole business, which the groom probably thought was cheap enough. When the worthy magistrate learned of his mistake, however, he overtook the happy groom and attempted to collect the right amount, but the groom was obdurate, and hung onto the whole amount. He would not give the squire a cent, and the result was that the squire is a very mad man, and would undo his work if he could.

In the latest issue of several magazines appears an interesting story of a Paducah lady, Mrs. Matilda Fauntleroy, who resides a Fifth and Harrison streets with her daughter, Mrs. J. Henry Smith, and is 82 years old, but still bright and active, with a clear memory and an air of youth that makes her very popular with her many friends. The substance of the story, which is from the pen of Miss Ora V. Leigh, of the News-Democrat, relates the incident of Mrs. Fauntleroy's mother-in-law's life in which she refused the hand of George Washington, afterwards the "Father of his Country," and married her own cousin.

The general and deep regret felt by all Paducah in the going from our city of the Rev. W. E. Cave, D. D., of the First Presbyterian church was expressed by the large congregation who heard him Sunday. Dr. Cave always attracts many outsiders, and men especially, to his church, and he will have complimentary audiences from now until the first of the year when it is he expects to go.

Convicted Murderer's Courtesy.

At Emporia, Kan., recently a convicted murderer who had been sentenced to five years in the penitentiary, delivered an address of thanks, as follows: "I am entirely satisfied with the verdict and the sentence, and I am confident that not one jury in ten would have been so lenient with me. I desire to sincerely thank the court for its just and courteous manner of conducting this trial, and I hope that the blessing of God will remain with you all."

MY FELLOW PASSENGER

(Original.)

I had met during my sojourn abroad, where I was attending lectures at a German university, Miss Mollie Arnold, a fellow countrywoman, and had become engaged to her. She was traveling with her aunt. She was now in London, where she had gone to meet her parents, who were coming from America. I was to join her there and receive their inspection.

Crossing the channel at Calais, I took the train at Dover for London. I had become an inveterate smoker among the Germans and was much pleased to find the compartment I entered entirely unoccupied, so I read and smoked till we stopped at a station not far from London, when a gentleman got in the compartment with me and at once began to sniff the air ominously and let down the windows. Irritated at being thus disturbed, I smoked on.

"Pardon me," he said. "Is this a smoking carriage?"

Now, at the university I had learned all sorts of queer methods of hoodwinking and browbeating and otherwise getting the better of people. The German student is a reckless, good-natured, thoughtless individual, who never stops at any daring method of attaining his ends. It occurred to me to frighten the man into leaving the carriage, so that I could smoke on undisturbed. Without heeding his question I glared at him. Then, leaning back in the cushions, I began to mumble incoherently. The gentleman looked at me inquiringly for a few moments, then unfolded a paper and began to read. When his ticket was taken, he whispered something to the guard, who looked at me sharply, then said:

"Very well, sir. I'll put you in another compartment at the next station."

Much pleased with the success of my maneuver, I smoked on, expecting soon to be relieved entirely of one so narrow minded as to object to that smoke which I had come to consider as natural an element for man to breathe as the air of heaven.

When we reached the next station, the guard appeared at the door, accompanied by two policemen, who got into the carriage and without a word of explanation proceeded to handcuff me.

"E's the man," said one; "tallies to the description excellent."

"When did he escape?" asked my fellow passenger.

"Last night, sir. The keepers have been lookin' for 'im heverwhere."

I was taken from the carriage, leaving the compartment to the gentleman who did not smoke and whom I observed as I was led away settling himself to his paper with as much complacency as if nothing had happened. I was taken to a third class carriage, where I could breathe not only smoke, but garlic and onions, to my heart's content.

When we arrived at London, I was landed in an insane asylum, where it was discovered that an error had been made in mistaking me for an inmate who had escaped the night before. Nevertheless it was two days before I could convince the medical attendants that I was a sane man. Then I was discharged, went to my hotel, dressed and proceeded to call upon my fiancée and her family.

On the way I thought over a number of nice speeches to be made to Mrs. Arnold, bringing in how agreeably surprised I was to find her so much younger looking than I expected, just the mother for such a daughter, and all that. Then I turned over in my mind the most appropriate greeting for her father. I found it more difficult to strike something clever and appropriate for the man, for men do not take so kindly as women to compliments, but I succeeded in inventing several speeches, all of which expressed surprise at something which was better than I had expected, intending to choose the most appropriate when I should see the subject for whom the remarks were intended.

I was first received by Mollie alone, impatient to hear the cause of my delay. Not caring to reveal the episode in which I had been so ingloriously worsted, I told her I had been delayed in my departure. Then her mother came in, and I was presented and looked over. Though the ordeal was a trying one, I delivered myself of my compliments with rare assurance and success. While in the midst of a flowery speech I heard a footstep in the hall and turned on the mental switch that would fire fine words at the father.

Great heaven! He was my fellow passenger! The moment he saw me he recognized me. Confusing ideas were struggling in his brain. I was the lunatic, yet there I was, in immaculate evening dress, looking as sane as any one, an accepted suitor for his daughter's hand. I stood looking at him with a flaming face, wishing the floor would open and let me down out of sight.

My prospective father-in-law then and there won my heart. Without any reference to what had occurred between us he advanced and grasped my hand. "Mollie," he said, "has given us such flattering descriptions of you that I was sure no one could possibly come up to them. I am delighted to find that she has not exaggerated. I know the German student well, and I am sure I shall find you, like him, a good natured young fellow who would risk his neck to carry out some fantastic imposture. But now that you have finished at the university I dare say you will show more mature qualities."

Alas, my fine speech came from the mouth of the other man!

ASSESSMENTS FOR TAXES.

The assessment of both the city and county are about complete, so far as the assessors are concerned, and the remainder of the responsibility rests largely on the supervisors of the tax books. Every taxpayer should be interested in the result, for a large assessment means a reduced tax rate, and a reduced tax rate is what every taxpayer wants, especially in a place where he gets no benefit from the taxes year in and year out.

Attention has been called before to the inadequate assessments, and this year it is hoped that the supervisors, if the assessors have not done their work well, will see that the assessments are complete. An assessment like the last one for the county indicates that few people are paying taxes on their property in the proper amount, or else a good many of them escape. The assessor should get everything taxable and make the burden just and proportionate. When the assessor, by his report, comes before the people and says that there are subject to taxation only a few hundred dollars worth of diamonds in McCracken county, or only a few hundred dollars worth of jewelry, with many other things in proportion, the people know it is not true, and something should be done to correct such abuses.

It is suggested that McCracken county should have a map made of the territory within her borders. There is not a single complete map of the county, and while one would doubtless prove quite expensive, in a few years it would more than pay for itself. It would enable the assessor to list a great deal of property that doubtless he now misses, and in addition would prove beneficial in many other ways. For instance it would greatly aid in getting more rural free delivery routes. When the last were being surveyed there could not be found a single map of the county by which to go, and it is the same way with all enterprises that seek a location here. Jefferson county has just let a contract for an elaborate map and every county should have one. The city recently had such a map made, and results are said to have been more than satisfactory.

NOT A PRECEDENT.

Speaking of the reversal of the Caleb Powers' case, the Lexington Herald, Democratic, says: "It was rather a queer coincidence that about the time of the reversal of the judgment in the Powers case, largely because the trial judge refused to vacate the bench when the affidavit of Powers was filed, the prison commissioners should parole Dr. Massie, who was convicted in the Owen circuit court and the judgment was reversed because the trial judge refused to vacate the bench when Dr. Massie filed his affidavit. The legal profession know well the very striking and vigorous language employed by Judge Bennett in his opinion reversing that judgment because of this refusal. It was well that by this parole the state had its recollection refreshed and thus could understand that the recent opinion was in accordance with the Kentucky precedents and with decisions rendered when our court of appeals was unanimously Democratic. In the still more celebrated appeal of Squire Turner was the same decision made. That was in many respects one of the most remarkable and celebrated causes in our legal history."

It is noticed in the various state associations that meet, including good roads conventions, world's fair exhibit conferences and other things, Paducah is seldom, if ever, represented. This does not speak well for the city and county. It betokens a lack of enterprise and interest on part of our citizens, and doubtless causes wonder among other people of the state. Because Paducah is located in an extreme portion of the state is no reason that her people should isolate themselves and refuse to become interested in the many things that are undertaken for the benefit of the state. Paducah is next to Louisville, the largest city in the state, in many things, and the people should take more interest in matters that effect the prosperity and welfare of the state. Citizens are appointed on committees of various associations, delegates are appointed to attend meetings, and that is the last ever heard of it. When the meetings come off Paducah usually is not represented. It is "too much trouble." Of the scores of letters now being printed in Louisville papers from all parts of the state relative to the state exhibit work, and offering to assist in it, only one has been noticed from Paducah, and that was from a prominent liquor dealer. We need to wake up down here.

It is difficult to understand how the tobacco growers of Kentucky are going to "bust" the trust by not raising any tobacco for five years. It may be that the trust will be "busted" at the expiration of that time, but the probability is that the farmers would be long before.

The United States court, in a case taken up from Missouri, has just decided that the clause of insurance policies relative to suicide is invalid, and that insurance can be collected on a suicide's life no matter what the policy may specify.

Marshal Crow and Prosecuting Attorney Gilbert have both rejected the fairest offers that the city's representatives could legally make them. Now they can be ousted with a clearer conscience.

"Good Old Summer Time" would sound quite appropriate just now. Or at least feel it.

It is "whole hog or none" with Marshal Crow.

THE BOYS LAUGHED LAST.

"Wise" Man Had Come to Regret His Unjust Suspicions.

"It takes a little courage to tell a joke on one's self," said the salesman, "especially if the cause is apt to be accepted, as a degree of stupidity. But things with a touch of humor will happen in one's life that will bear telling.

"Walking down Fulton street during the busy noon hour one day, the thoroughfare thronged with folks going to or coming from their luncheon, I espied two urchins, newsboys apparently, crouching on the stoop leading into the hallway of one of the big office buildings. My eyes at the same moment fell on a greenish looking piece of paper—apparently made to represent a greenback carefully folded several times—lying on the sidewalk right in front of the pair.

"Perhaps it was that some of the ancient April fool jokes flashed through my mind, as I thought I detected a mischievous smile on the boys' faces. At any rate, I was not going to be fooled. So kicking the innocent bit of paper with a superior air toward them, I exclaimed: "Why, boys, there is money lying in the streets here, why not pick it up?"

"And the boys did so.
"Unfolding it quickly, they ran around the corner for dear life. It was a crisp, good five-dollar bill."—New York Times.

Newfoundland Honesty.

Simple honesty is one of the striking characteristics of the people of Newfoundland—that piety and honesty which accompany an austere religion. Doors are not locked, property lies exposed everywhere, no watch is kept on the fish when they lie drying on the flakes. No man takes advantage of his neighbor, no man quarrels with his brother, no man appeals to the law, nobody is arrested.

Good Record of a Watch.

Although 125 years old a watch owned by a gentleman in Gloucestershire, Eng., still keeps excellent time. It was worn at Trafalgar, during the Peninsular war, at Waterloo, through the China war in 1840, and finally in the Indian mutiny.

SAYS MEN ARE COWARDS.

Woman Dentist Thinks Little of Opposite Sex's Bravery.

"Men!" answered the woman dentist emphatically, when asked who gave her the greatest trouble. "Indeed, they are the greatest cowards on earth. Let alone their inability to endure much pain, they are as scary as yearling colts. Besides many of them don't know I'm not a man until I appear in the reception room, and the shock simply paralyzes not a few. Only once in a while is one clever enough to back out gracefully—to pretend he only came to consult, or that he had an almost forgotten but nevertheless important date at the club. The rest stammer and hesitate until you'd think they were up against the fate of the 'Six Hundred'—jaws of death and gates of hell, as you remember. I used to have a hard time to keep a straight face. One little man half my size tremblingly asked: 'Have you really the heart to pull a tooth, madam?' He only shook the more when I assured him I had the strength. Another—I'll never forget him—after wriggling around for a while in mingled pain and terror, suddenly began to nurse his foot. And, though his face was swollen up frightfully, he at length escaped by pretending he was in search of a chiropodist to treat a troublesome corn. Have I men patients? Oh, yes; once they are blindfolded and backed in the first time they rather prefer a woman dentist."

PROFESSOR ATE SPECIMEN.

Put the Trichinous Pork to an Untended Use.

Needing some measly pork for the purpose of demonstrating trichina in his class in biology, the professor requested his butcher to save a piece of measly pork the first time some of the diseased meat was found in the store.

The butcher said that he occasionally came across trichinous pork, and that he always threw it away, but promised to keep the next piece for the professor.

Several weeks later no trichinous meat having arrived at the laboratory the professor became impatient and called at the butcher's store to learn the cause of the delay.

The clerk at once said that such a piece of meat had been found a few weeks ago.

"Didn't I ask you to keep it for me?" angrily inquired the disappointed professor. "What did you do with it?"

"Why, we saved it for you as we promised," answered the puzzled clerk.

"Well, where is it?"

"We sent it down to your house two weeks ago with the other meat."

STRICT CENSORSHIP IN TURKEY

Formal Disapproval of Ancient Greek Drama Is Expressed.

The Turkish government through its censor has now shown its disapproval of ancient Greek drama, and has gone so far as to prohibit a performance of Euripides' tragedy of "Iphigenia in Taurus," considering it subversive of public order. A first representation of this work was given recently at the Union Francaise, in Constantinople, which enjoys extra territorial privileges, and is therefore beyond the reach of the censor and police. A second performance was to have been given later, to which the public were to be invited, and the only means of stopping it was to threaten with imprisonment those of the organizers who are Turkish subjects. The reason for the interdiction is that there is reference in the tragedy to regicide—the murder of Agamemnon by Clytemnestra. Myth or legend, it is perfectly immaterial to the censor, and he has had the performance stopped and all translations of the tragedy into modern Greek bought up, to prevent the public from reading it.

Knew What They Were.

Dr. Henry Van Dyke tells the following story:

A well-known professor of literature at an American university was talking with his wife one morning at the breakfast table about the relative merits of prose and verse as forms of expression. His two children, Walter and Maud, aged seven and six, respectively, were sitting quietly and apparently paying no attention to the conversation, when all at once the little girl looked up inquiringly and said:

"Papa, what are proes, anyway?"

Before the father had time to answer the boy spoke up, with a superior smile:

"Prose? Don't you know what prose are? Why, they're those little animals that go around without feet."

Mother and Son Graduate.

Mrs. Helen Clarke Balmer, 1327 Hollywood avenue, Edgewater, Chicago, is probably the first woman who was ever graduated from a university in the same year with her son. Mrs. Balmer has just completed a three-year course in literature at the Northwestern university, while her eldest son, Edwin C. Balmer, took the full course, completing it in three years.

IT'S ALWAYS THIS WAY.

Topeka Capital Tells of Tendency of Modern Citizen.

Yesterday a man called at the Capital office with a grievance which he wanted the paper to take up. He wished the Capital to go into the matter and smash things generally. He wasn't satisfied with a certain state of things in a certain neighborhood, and he wanted the Capital to start something, and start it good and hard.

But the funny part of the matter was that when he was asked to give his name he balked. He said he didn't want his name used, and refused to give his initials after he inadvertently let his last name be known.

It was explained to him that what he knew of the matter, which is a common offense—and has no relation to the liquor trouble—would be of service in abating the nuisance; but he said that he "didn't wish to be dragged into it," and that if it was such a common thing perhaps it wouldn't be worth while to go to the trouble of stirring it up, after all.

That's always the way. People are always calling on newspapers to take up abuses and push for their relief, but they balk when asked to take an open hand in the game themselves.

From past experience the Capital feels sure that it would be impossible to gain anything for the public by taking the action suggested by the gentleman who called yesterday.—Topeka Capital.

American Newspapers.

Writing in the Independent on the subject of the subservency of the German press to government influence Poultney Bigelow expresses this opinion of American newspapers: "It is not for us Americans to brag about our newspapers, and there are many owners of great dailies who would look more ornamental on the gallows than in the top of a tall editorial tower. But whatever faults our papers have from one standpoint of good taste or private morals, on the whole, they get at the facts, and publish them without much regard as to whether it will please the government or not."

High Price for Painting.

At Christie's a portrait by Sir Henry Raeburn was bought by Messrs. Agnew for 6,500 guineas. It shows the two sons of David Monzo Binning in plum-brown dress, with white ruffs and stockings, seated in a landscape, the canvas measuring 60 by 40 inches.

TESTING ALL IRON

Jailer Jones Determined to Have no More Escapes.

No Trace Found of Louis Buford—Two Prisoners Who Would Not Escape

This morning Foreman Bros. and Jackson Foundry company, have laborers employed at the county jail repairing the iron portion of the cell base that was torn away by Louis Buford, colored, who escaped from the jail on Sunday morning some time between the hours of 3 and 4 o'clock.

The foundry men think that Buford must have had a chisel or something on that order as the iron looks like it was cut by some such instrument. The only tools found was a knife, which had been converted into a small saw and two iron bars, one which he had taken from his bunk. All the braces in the jail have been tightened and fixed so that they can not be removed from beds. All the closets and sinks have been repaired and where any have been rusted they are replaced by new ones. The bottom of the cells are in good condition but the iron under this had rotted so that the force of a strong kick could tear it through. After knocking the bolts off the sink base he had an easy time escaping. There were two other prisoners in the same cell, Roxie Level and Jerry Cook, the former being in for robbery and the latter for malicious cutting. Neither escaped although they could have done so as easily as Buford. They said that they did not want to. Jailer Jones is making thorough repairs and is testing every piece of iron about the jail and will see that no more prisoners escape. The police are on the lookout for Buford.

TWO SOULS AND SO FORTH.

Diffident Youth Learns Something From Summer Girl.

They were wandering about the dark, deserted piazza, arm in arm, talking softly, as people usually do under such circumstances. They had only known each other two days, but the days were long at a summer hotel and time is short.

This may seem like a paradox, but it isn't.

He was a summer young man, as she was a summer girl, and he was not accustomed to crowding the mourners, so that, notwithstanding he had been very devoted, he had been somewhat diffident in the material expression of his devotion.

The girl was quick to note this, but he had not caught on.

He was still permitting "I would" to wait on "I dare not."

So it was they strolled up and down, up and down, on that piazza, until the girl tired.

As they turned at a far-away corner, she saw a lonely chair waiting invitingly.

"Mr. Jerome," she said, cooly, "there's a chair. Let's sit down."

"Permit me," he responded, gallantly drawing it forward. "Take this. I'll get another."

But the girl didn't take it. She stood there laughing a cute little gurgling, appealing laugh, and somehow Mr. Jerome tumbled to the fact that one chair was plenty for two if a man only went about it right.

BOY'S QUEST OF KNOWLEDGE.

Youthful Inquisitiveness a Sore Trial for Parent.

"But, father, do tell me, please, why—"

"Well, what is it now? I'm sure I don't know why a good meerschaum is like an artist, because it draws and colors nicely; nor why mermaids should be termed fast because they live with the swells of the ocean; nor why the Russian nation should be compared with the sea because her nobles are swells and her people serfs. And I don't know whether the world resembles music because it is filled with sharps and flats; nor whether a coach with a drag on is like St. George; nor why a man should be such an utter fool as to impose upon himself by taxing his own memory; nor why a prudent woman is like a pin, unless it is that her head prevents her from going too far. But, Tommy, I do know that the crane is not the bird best fitted to lift a heavy weight and that the whale was not termed Jonah's tutor, though he brought him up; and that poor old Joshua was not an orphan, though he was the son of Nun. However, it puzzles me to think why Ruth should have treated Boaz so badly as to pull his ears and tread on his corn, and why—

"And now do let me read."

Water to Succeed Fire.

Invention and discovery assure us that there will be no limit to progress in the long distance carrying of electric energy. While water holds out to run, therefore, why should man bother with questions of coal mine exhaustion or wrestle endlessly with the smoke nuisance? Silently, cleanly, without fumes or fumes, a power that heats, lights and moves, all from the same wire, will yet be brought cheaply to the door of every shop and

Why New York Man Gave Up Paper in Vermont.
"I thought you were running a paper up in Vermont," said the old reporter as he bumped into another old reporter
in the afternoon crush on Park Row.
When they reached an island of safety made by a subway inclosure,
the latter replied: "I have been running a paper in Vermont, a daily—I was managing editor, city editor, reporter, business manager, and all the rest of it. But I couldn't make it go."
"Have a row with yourself?" asked the one who had not jumped the re-portorial traces.
"No, but some of those New Englanders were too thrifty for me. The paper costs $6 a year. One man subscribes for it and sublets it to his neighbor for $3. This neighbor then turns around and sells a third reading for $1. I'd rather be back on 'space', so I simply 'fired' myself as soon as I found a 'come-on' and unloaded the plant."—New York Tribune.

THE WITCH ANGEL

(Original.)

There is a German legend of a girl who would accept no suitor who could not outrun her. Lithe and fleet as she was, she could not have distanced and tired out the many young fellows who accepted the test had she not been a witch. At least this is as the legend has it, though it is possible for a girl built for a racer to run very fast. Bertha Gerhart was very slender, her muscles were hard, and she was tall for a woman, having great length of limb from the knee to the hip. Her face, without animation while at rest, when she was being chased by a suitor grew bright, her eyes glistened, and her lips wore a perpetual smile. She was continually looking back, and when she did so her pursuer started on with increased speed. In this way the girl led him to follow her so long as any strength remained to him, so that at last, when he sank down beaten in the race, he was in danger of death from exhaustion.

A number of young fellows had run
the race with her only to be tired out, while Bertha's endurance seemed to give her greater fleetness the longer she ran. After one of her pursuing suitors had died of heart failure the baron on whose domain she lived shut her up in a tower in his castle and,
upon the representations of her neighbors that she was a witch, decided that she should be burned at the stake.
The baron had a son, Oswald, slightly lame, a great student. Knowledge is the best means of dispelling the mists of superstition, and Oswald ridiculed the charge of witchcraft. He gained access to Bertha's cell, fell in love with her, and his passion being returned, begged his father's permission to marry her. The baron was horrified and, in order to separate his son from the witch, ordered him to go for a course of study to the University of Paris.
But Oswald was so obstinate and made his father so much trouble that the baron, who was growing old and consequently weakening, finally consented to a compromise. Oswald proposed to demonstrate that Bertha was no witch by chasing and catching her himself.
The baron only yielded to such a risk after his son had declared that if not successful the connection, so far as he was concerned, should be ended. The baron also insisted that Bertha should be told that if she escaped this suitor she should be set at liberty and troubled no further. If caught, she must die at the stake. In this way the father hoped to escape a witch for a daughter-in-law.

The race came on. While waiting for the signal to start, Bertha stood a dozen yards in advance of her suitor, looking at him with melancholy eyes, remembering that this the only man she had ever loved she must escape or lose her life. Oswald, who, with the exception of his lameness, was of a beautiful figure and face, threw all the love
he felt into a pleading look which said, "Yield to me and—death!" When the baron drew his rapier, the signal, the runners started, Bertha stepping off slowly, but nimbly, like a fawn, Oswald with a limping gait, showing plainly that it would be impossible for him to catch her unless she permitted.
Bertha led him here and there within the prescribed inclosure, keeping but a short distance ahead of him and turning often to look at him, not entirely, but as if to beg his forgiveness for not permitting him to catch her.
Though Oswald was not permitted to speak to her, he pleaded with every feature of his face for her to yield.
Then she would look at him reproachfully, to which he would reply with the same expression as before, as if to say, "Be mine and—die!"

Bertha ran on, always leading her lover by a few rods, and it seemed that, like her former suitors, he was sure in the end to sink down exhausted. The onlookers, more than ever convinced that the girl was a witch, appealed to the baron to put an end to the unequal contest. And now they saw Oswald draw his dagger, the hilt of which resembled a cross, and hold it up before Bertha's eyes.

"He's showing her the cross," said the people. "If she is a witch, she will sink down at once."
But Bertha only looked the more melancholy out of her eyes, casting them upward, as if in prayer. Then Oswald pointed the dagger at his heart.
"If she's a witch," the people said now, "she'll throw a spell upon him to make him drive it into his breast."

But Bertha, when she saw it was her life or her lover's that must be given up, slackened her pace, running slower and slower, Oswald creeping nearer, till at last she stopped, tottered and fell back into his arms.

Then a great shout arose:
"She's an angel from heaven come down to bless the young heir to the barony!"

"I have given my life for yours,"
said Bertha in despair.

"You have saved your life by your proffered sacrifice and will be my bride."

The baron was pleased both at the devotion of the girl for his son and at that son's wisdom. Now that he was satisfied that she was not a witch he welcomed Bertha as a daughter and proclaimed many days of festivities for the wedding. As soon as it was consummated he turned over the care of his estates and the welfare of his vast tenantry to Oswald, who, though beloved before, was now adored by them. Bertha spent her life in discovering and ministering to their wants and soon came to be as much beloved as her husband. Many a person accused of witchcraft appealed to her, and many a one was saved by her interposition from a horrible death at the stake. She at last came to be called the Witch Angel.

NEW USES FOR ALCOHOL.

European Governments Experimenting in Many Ways.

No innovation in European automobile practice within the last year or two has attained such importance as the trial of alcohol in the place of gasoline. The attempt to effect a substitute has been stimulated by,
if it did not originate in, two potent forces. One is the desire of the foreign farmers to find a use for the superabundant and cheap spirit manufactured from sugar beet refuse and from potatoes. The other is the aggressively helpful attitude assumed by the French and German governments. Several exhibitions have been held within the last few months to illustrate the many practical applications which can be made of alcohol, and in France two months ago an elaborate series of tests was made, under the auspices of the minister of agriculture, to show its special fitness for propelling vehicles. By the French it is customary to employ a mixture of alcohol and gasoline, and not the latter alone, because the gasoline engine can then be retained with little modification. In Germany an effort is being made to perfect a motor working on the same general principle—explosion—but different enough in details to burn pure alcohol. The problem has not been fully worked out, nor, for that matter, is the economy of alcohol fully ascertained. Enough is known on this point, however, and also as to its efficiency, to make it a formidable rival of gasoline in countries where there is no revenue tax on vegetable spirit.—New York Tribune.

NEW HIS WIFE'S ABILITIES.

Gardener Saved from Serious Injury
by His Presence of Mind.

A savage dog was sniffing about a market place in search of something to eat. He came too close to a choleric gardener from the suburbs and received a kick, whereupon he fastened his teeth in the leg of the kicker, gratifying to that person's consternation and the terror of the assembled customers.

The wife of the gardener, who was assisting him in disposing of the stock of vegetables on hand, did not lose her presence of mind. She immediately picked up a stone and prepared to hurl it at the animal.

"Martha," yelled her husband, "don't throw it at the dog. Throw it at me!
Throw it at me!"

She did, and the dog fell.
Such is the value of presence of mind.

The Expert.

"Ah, poor fellow!" said the magazine editor's visitor, drawing his chair up to the desk after a sad-looking, middle-aged man had shambled out.
"I'm glad you gave him something.
If I hadn't feared you might regard it as an impertinence I would have given him a little change myself. What a poor, broken-down looking chap he was. What was his story? The same old thing, I suppose. Lost his job, can't get a chance anywhere else because he's more than forty. Family on his hands, too, very likely. By George, it's a tough proposition anyway you look at it."

"I don't quite understand what you are referring to."

"Why, that poor fellow who was in here just now. I saw you give him some money. It must come mighty hard for one with a vestige of manhood left in him to ask for—"

"Oh, that fellow? He wasn't begging. He's the man who edits our department on 'How to Succeed.' I gave him his money in dribs and drabs, I made it last through the month.
You'll probably see him lying at the bottom of the stairs in happy unconsciousness when you go out."—Chica-

==113==

"Disappeared!" cried Prosper indignantly. "Disappeared! Why, monsieur? Do you not see that such a step would be a confession of guilt—would authorize the world to say that I am hiding so as to enjoy undisturbed the stolen fortune?"

"Well, what then?" said the man with the red whiskers coldly. "Did you not say just now that the sacrifice of your life is made? The skillful swimmer thrown into the river by malefactors is careful not to rise to the surface immediately. On the contrary, he dives and remains below as long as his breath holds out. He comes up again at a great distance and lands out of sight. Then, when he is supposed to be dead, lost forever to the sight of man, he rises up and has his vengeance. You have an enemy? Some petty imprudence will betray him. But while he sees you on the watch he will be on his guard."

It was with a sort of amazed submission that Prosper listened to this man who, though a friend of his father, was an utter stranger to himself.

He submitted to the ascendancy of a nature more energetic than his own. In his helpless condition he was grateful to find a friend.

"I will follow your advice, monsieur," he said.

"I was sure you would. Let us decide upon the course you shall pursue. And remember that the proceeds of the sale will be needed. Have you any ready money? No, but you must have some. Knowing that you would need it at once, I brought here a furniture dealer, and he will give 12,000 francs for everything except the pictures."

The cashier could not refrain from shrugging his shoulders, which M. Verduret observed.

"Yes," said he, "it is hard. I will admit, but it is necessary. Listen. You are the invalid, and I am the doctor charged to cure you. If I cut to the quick, you will have to endure it. It is the only way to save you."

"Cut away, then, monsieur," answered Prosper, submitting.

"Well, we will hurry, for time passes. You have a friend, M. de Lagors?"

"Raoul? Yes, monsieur, an intimate friend."

"Now tell me, who is this fellow?"

The term "fellow" seemed to wound Prosper.

"M. de Lagors, monsieur," he said, piqued, "is M. Fauvel's nephew. He is a rich young man, handsome, intelligent, cultured and the best friend I have."

"Hum!" said M. Verduret. "I shall be delighted to make the acquaintance of one adorned by so many good qualities. I must let you know that I wrote him a note in your name asking him to come here, and he sent word that he would be here directly."

"What?" cried the astonished Prosper. "Do you suppose?"

"Oh, I suppose nothing. Only I must see this young man. Also I have arranged and will submit to you a little plan of conversation."

A ring at the bell interrupted M. Verduret.

"The Dickens! Adieu to my plan! Here he is! Where can I hide so as to hear and see?"

"There in my bedroom. Leave the door open and the curtain down."

A second ring was heard.

"I must go," said Prosper.

"Now, remember, Prosper," said M. Verduret in a warning tone, "not one word to this man about your plans or about me. Pretend to be discouraged, helpless, hesitating."

And he disappeared behind the curtain as Prosper ran to open the door.

Prosper's portrait of M. de Lagors had not been exaggerated. So handsome a face and manly a figure could belong only to a noble character. Although Raoul said that he was twenty-four he appeared to be not more than twenty. He had a superb figure, well knit and supple; a beautiful white brow, shaded by soft chestnut curly hair, and soft blue eyes which beamed with frankness.

His first impulse was to throw himself into Prosper's arms. "My poor, dear friend!" he said, taking Prosper's hands. "My poor Prosper!"

But beneath these affectionate demonstrations there was a certain constraint, which, if it escaped the cashier, was noticed by M. Verduret.

"Your letter, my dear Prosper," said Raoul after being seated, "made me ill. I was so frightened by it. I asked myself if you could have lost your mind. Then I left everything to come to you."

Prosper did not seem to hear him. He was preoccupied about the letter he had not written. What were its contents? Who was this man whose assistance he had accepted?

"You must not feel discouraged," continued M. de Lagors. "At your age you may commence life anew. Your friends are still left to you. Rely upon me. I am rich. Half of my fortune is at your disposal."

This generous offer, made at a moment like this with such frank simplicity, deeply touched Prosper.

"Thanks, Raoul," he said, with emotion; thank you! But unfortunately all the money in the world would be of no use now."

"Why so? What are you going to do? Do you propose to remain in Paris?"

"I know not, Raoul. I have made no plans yet. My mind is confused."

"I will tell you what to do," replied Raoul quickly. "You must start afresh. Until this mysterious robbery is explained it will never do for you to remain in Paris."

"And if it is never explained?"

"Only the more reason for your remaining in oblivion. I have been talking about you to Clameran. You are unjust to him, for he is your friend. 'If I were in Prosper's place,' he said, 'I would turn everything into money and embark for America. There I would make a fortune and return to crush with my millions those who have suspected me.'"

This advice offended Prosper's pride, but he said nothing. He was thinking of what the stranger had said to him.

"Well?" said Raoul.

"I will think it over. I will see. I would like to know what M. Fauvel says."

"My uncle? I suppose you know that I have declined the offer he made me to enter his banking house and we have almost quarreled. I have not set foot in his house for over a month, but I hear of him occasionally."

"Through whom?"

"Through your friend, young Cavillon. My uncle, they say, is more distressed by this affair than you are. He is scarcely ever at the bank and wanders about as if in a terrible dream."

"And Mme. Fauvel and—Prosper hesitated—"and Mlle. Madeleine?"

"Oh," said Raoul lightly, "my aunt is as devoted as ever. She has a mass said for the benefit of the sinner. As to my pretty, icy cousin, she cannot bring herself down to common matters, because she is entirely absorbed in preparing for the fancy ball to be given day after tomorrow by MM. Jandier. She has discovered, so one of her friends told me, a wonderful dressmaker, a stranger who has suddenly appeared from no one knows where, who is making a costume of Catherine de' Medici's maid of honor, and it is to be a marvel."

Excessive suffering brings with it a sort of insensibility. Prosper had reached that state of impassibility from which he never expected to be aroused when this last blow made him cry out with pain:

"Madeleine! Oh, Madeleine!"

M. de Lagors, pretending not to have heard him, arose.

"I must leave you now, my dear Prosper," he said. "Saturday I will see these ladies at the ball and will bring you news of them. Keep up your courage and remember that, whatever happens, you can count on me."

Raoul shook Prosper's hand and left the house. Prosper remained immovable, overcome by disappointment.

He was aroused from his gloomy reverie by the red whiskered man, who came from his concealment.

"So these are your friends."

"Yes," said Prosper, with bitterness. "You heard him offer me half of his fortune?"

M. Verduret shrugged his shoulders with an air of compassion.

"That was very stingy on his part," he said. "Why did he not offer the whole? Offers cost nothing. But I have no doubt that this pretty boy would cheerfully give 10,000 francs to put the ocean between you and him."

"He, monsieur? Why so?"

"Who knows? Perhaps for the same reason that he had not set foot for a month in his uncle's house."

"But that is the truth, monsieur. I am sure of it."

"Naturally," said M. Verduret, with a provoking smile. "But," he continued seriously, "we have devoted enough time to this fair youth. Now be good enough to change your dress, and we will go and call on M. Fauvel."

This proposal seemed revolting to Prosper.

"Never!" he exclaimed, with excitement. "No, never will I voluntarily set eyes on that wretch!"

This resistance did not surprise M. Verduret.

"I can understand your feelings toward him," said he, "but at the same time I hope you will change your mind. For the same reason that I wished to see M. de Lagors do I wish to see M. Fauvel. It is necessary, you understand. Are you so very weak that you cannot restrain yourself for five minutes? I shall introduce myself as one of your relatives, and you need not speak a word."

"If it is absolutely necessary," said Prosper, "if you wish—"

"It is necessary. Come on. Hurry and fix yourself up a little. It is getting late, and I am hungry. We will breakfast on our way there."

Prosper had hardly passed into his bedroom when the bell rang again. M. Verduret opened the door. It was the porter, who handed him a thick letter.

"This letter," said he, "was left this morning for M. Bertomy. I was so flustered when he came that I forgot to hand it to him. It is a very odd looking letter. Is it not, monsieur?"

It was indeed a singular epistle. The address was not written, but formed of printed letters, carefully cut from a book and pasted on the envelope.

ope.

"Oh, ho!" cried M. Verduret. "What is this?" Then, turning toward the porter, he said, "Wait till I return."

He went into the next room and closed the door. There he found Prosper, who had heard the bell ring and was anxious to know what was going on.

"Here is a letter for you," said M. Verduret.

Prosper at once tore open the envelope.

Some bank notes dropped out. He counted them. There were ten.

Prosper's face turned purple.

"What does this mean?" he asked.

"We will read the letter and find out," replied M. Verduret.

The letter, like the address, was composed of printed words cut out and pasted on the paper.

It was short, but explicit:

My Dear Prosper—A friend who knows the horror of your situation sends this succor. There is one heart, he assured, that shares your sufferings. Go away. Leave France. You are young. The future is before you. Go, and may this money help you.

As M. Verduret read the note Prosper's rage increased. He was angry and perplexed, for he could not explain the rapidly succeeding events which were so calculated to mystify his already confused brain.

"Everybody wishes me to go away," he cried. "Then there must be a conspiracy against me."

M. Verduret smiled with satisfaction.

"At last you begin to open your eyes. You begin to understand. Yes, there are people who hate you because of the evil they have done you. There are people to whom your presence in Paris is a perpetual menace and who will not feel safe till they are rid of you."

"But who are these people, monsieur? Tell me who presumes to send this money?"

"If I knew, my dear Prosper," said Verduret sadly, "my task would be at an end, for then I would know who committed this robbery of which you are accused. But I have finally procured evidence which will sooner or later become convincing proof. I have heretofore only made deductions more or less probable. I now possess knowledge which proves that I was mistaken. I walked in darkness; now I have a light to guide me. Now we must take advantage of this evidence gained by the imprudence of our enemies. We will begin with the porter."

He opened the door and called out:

"I say, my good man, please come here!"

The porter entered, looking very much surprised at the authority exercised over his lodger by this stranger.

"Who gave you this letter?" said M. Verduret.

"A messenger, who said he was paid for bringing it."

"Do you know him?"

"I know him well."

"Go and bring him here."

After the porter had gone M. Verduret drew from his pocket his diary and compared a page of it with the notes which he had spread over the table.

"These notes were not sent by the thief," he said.

"Do you think so, monsieur?"

"I am sure of it—that is, unless the thief is endowed with extraordinary penetration and forethought. One thing is certain—these notes are not part of the 350,000 francs which was stolen from the safe."

"Yet," said Prosper, who could not explain this certainty on the part of his protector—"yet—"

"There is no yet about it. I have the numbers of all the stolen notes."

"What! When even I did not have them?"

"But the bank had, fortunately. When we undertake an affair, we must anticipate everything and forget nothing. It is no excuse for a man to say, 'I did not think of it' when he commits some oversight. I thought of the bank."

If in the beginning Prosper had felt some repugnance about confiding in his father's friend, the feeling had now disappeared.

He understood that alone, scarcely master of himself, governed only by the inspirations of his inexperience, never would he have the patient penetration of this singular man.

Verduret continued talking to himself, as if he had forgotten Prosper's presence:

"Then, as this package did not come from the thief, it is plain that it can only come from the other person who was near the safe at the time of the robbery, but could not prevent it, and now feels remorse. The probability of two persons assisting at the robbery, a probability suggested by the scratch, is now changed into undeniable certainty. Therefore I was right."

Prosper, listening attentively, tried hard to comprehend this monologue, which he dared not interrupt.

"Let us seek," went on the big man, "this second person whose conscience pricks him and yet who dares not reveal anything."

He read the letter over several times, scanning the sentences and weighing the words.

"Evidently this letter was composed by a woman. Never would one man doing another man a service and sending him money use the word 'succor.' A man would have said loan, money or some other equivalent, but succor—never. No one but a woman ignorant of masculine susceptibilities would have naturally made use of this word to express the idea it represents. As to the sentence 'There is one heart,' and so on, it could only have been written by a woman. Now let us see if we can discover whence the printed words were taken to compose these sentences."

He approached the window and began to study the pasted words with all the scrupulous attention which an antiquarian would devote to an old, half effaced manuscript.

"Small type," he said, "very slender and clear, well printed. The paper is thin and glossy. These words have not been cut from a newspaper or a periodical. I have seen type like this.

I recognize it at once. Didot often uses it. So does Mme. de Tours."

He stopped with his mouth open and eyes fixed, making a strong appeal to his memory.

Suddenly he struck his forehead.

"Now I have it!" he cried. "Now I have it! Why did I not see it at once? These words have all been cut from a prayer book. We will look at least, and then we shall be certain."

He moistened one of the words pasted on the paper with his tongue, and when it was sufficiently softened he detached it with a pin. On the other side was printed a Latin word—Deus.

"Ah, ha!" he said, with a little laugh of satisfaction. "I knew it. Father Taberlet, if he were here, would be pleased to see this. But what has become of the mutilated prayer book? Can it have been burned? No, because a heavy bound book is not easily burned. It is thrown in some corner."

M. Verduret was interrupted by the porter, who returned with the messenger from Pigalle street.

"Ah, here you are," said the big man encouragingly. Then he showed the envelope of the letter.

"Do you remember bringing this letter here this morning?"

"Perfectly, monsieur. I took particular notice of the address. We don't often see anything like it."

"Who told you to bring it, a man or a woman?"

"Neither, monsieur; it was a porter."

This reply made the porter laugh very much, but M. Verduret did not even smile.

"A porter? Well, do you know this colleague of yours?"

"I never even saw him before."

"How does he look?"

"Neither tall nor short. He wore a green vest and had on his medal."

"Your description is so vague that it would suit every porter in the city. But did your colleague tell you who sent the letter?"

"No, monsieur. Putting 10 sous in my hand, he said: 'Here, carry this to 39 Chapal street. A coachman on the boulevard handed it to me.' Ten sous! I am sure he made more than 1."

This answer seemed to disconcert M. Verduret. So many precautions taken in sending the letter disturbed him and disarranged his plans.

"Do you think you would recognize the porter again?"

"Yes, monsieur, if I saw him."

"How much do you gain a day as a porter?"

"I don't exactly know, but I have a good stand. I suppose I make from 8 to 10 francs a day."

"Very well, I will give you 10 francs a day if you will go about and look for the porter who brought this letter. Every evening at 8 o'clock come to the Archangel, on the Quai St. Michel, give me a report of your search and receive your pay. Ask for M. Verduret. If you find our man, I will give you 50 francs. Will you do it?"

"I think I will, monsieur."

"Then don't lose a minute. Go on."

Although ignorant of M. Verduret's plans, Prosper began to comprehend the sense of his investigations. His fate depended upon their success, and yet he almost forgot this in his admiration of this singular man.

"Monsieur," said Prosper when the porter had left the room, "do you still think you see in this affair the hand of a woman?"

"More than ever, and a pious woman, too, and a woman who has two prayer books, since she could mutilate one to write to you."

"And you hope to find the cut book?"

"A great deal of hope, thanks to the opportunity I have of making an immediate search, which I will set about at once."

Saying this, he sat down and rapidly scratched off a few lines on a slip of paper, which he folded up and put in his vest pocket.

"Are you ready to go to M. Fauvel's? Yes? Come on, then. We have certainly earned our breakfast today."

CHAPTER VIII.

WHEN Raoul de Lagors spoke of M. Fauvel's extraordinary defection, he had not exaggerated. Since the fatal day when, upon his denunciation, his cashier had been arrested the banker had been a prey to the most gloomy melancholy and absolutely refused to take any interest in business affairs. He who had always been so domestic did not mingle with his family except at meals, when he would swallow a few mouthfuls and hastily leave the room. Shut up in his study, he would see no one.

The day of Prosper's release, about 3 o'clock, M. Fauvel was, as usual, seated in his study, with his elbows resting on the table and his face buried in his hands, when his office boy rushed in with a frightened look.

"Monsieur, the former cashier, M. Bertomy, is here with a friend. He says he must see you on business."

The banker started.

"Prosper!" he cried in a voice choked by anger. "How does he dare?"

A GOOD THING NOW

And Marshal Crow is Unwilling to Give Up His Chances.

Declined to Consider the Police Chiefship for His Present Place.

The fire and police commissioners, Messrs. J. K. Bonds, R. R. Sutherland, Pete Rogers and M. W. Clark, held their regular meeting last night and in compliance with a request from the board Marshal Crow met with them to discuss the state of affairs that exist at present in regard to the city marshalship.

A proposition was made to give Marshal Crow the position of chief of police at a salary of $100 a month if that would satisfy him, in return for his agreeing to the abolishment of the marshal's office without litigation, but the position was not guaranteed Marshal Crow for more than one year, and he declined. He now receives a salary of $75 a month, with perquisites that make the position worth $2500 a year and he prefers to take his chances in the courts of holding on, to accepting the $1200 job.

After the marshal announced his decision, the commissioners, ordered Chief of Police James Collins to take charge of the police court, and collect all fines and costs, and notified the city solicitor to notify Marshal Crow of the abolishment of his office, and that he would no longer be permitted to collect police court fines and costs or paid a salary.

The commissioners discussed the forthcoming appointment of police officers and firemen, but as the boards have not passed the necessary ordinances they could make no appointments.

At 7:30 another alarm was turned in from Tenth and Washington streets. The residence of Frank Owen was burning and was lost with nearly all the contents. The total loss will amount to $800, house, furniture and all.
